Using This Information

Median Family Income (MFI) is a term used often in talking about housing. As a statistic, median refers to the middle number. So given 101 people, person number 51 would be the middle, or median. The median family income for Portland, then, indicates the amount of household income for the middle family among all the families in the city.

Hourly wage assumes 40 hours/week, 52 weeks/year. "What is affordable" figures are 30% of total income and should cover rent (or mortgages and taxes) plus utilities. The 30% of income standard of affordability is used by the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development.
